Summary

Sharing the Planet

Subject Start date Duration Year English, Mathematics, Social Second Grade Week 1, January 6 weeks

Studies, Visual Arts

Inquiry

Transdisciplinary Theme

Sharing the planet

Communities and the relationships within and between them

The Central Idea

Where you are in the world affects the resources available to you (Resources and location)

Students will develop the understanding that communities share economic resources as they explore

The central idea is taught across subjects through social studies by reading and writing non-fiction texts about money, economic choices, and scarcity. Additionally, we connect communities sharing resources to environmental science (clean water and clean air) and conservation. Students also make connections to scarcity during health and social-emotional learning. In addition, students will study money in math.

Lines of Inquiry

- Resources and availability
- Location and availability
- Changes and resources
- Cause of the change

Teacher questions

- Is money the same in every country of the world?
- What are Goods and Services?
- What is the difference in a consumer and producer?
- What are opportunity costs?
- How does scarcity affect the price or purchase of a product?
- What are wants and needs?
- Why is it important to save as well as spend your income?

Key and Related Concepts

Key Concepts

Key

Concepts Key questions and definition Rationale Related concepts

Why is it as it is?

The understanding that things do not just happen; there are causal relationships at work, and that actions have consequences.

Causation, that actions have consequences, fits with the concept of spending/saving and opportunity costs. As we discuss the terms and hold Market Day, students will understand that actions and events have reasons and consequences.

-Consequences

How is it transforming?

The understanding that change is the process of movement from one state to another. It is universal and inevitable.

actions, will we look for?Summative -Current assessment.

Below is an old assessment that we are thinking about revisiting in the future.

Goal: Your goal is to sell a good or service at a Market Day.

Role: You are a producer of a good or service. You have been asked to participate in a Market Day to sell your good or service.

Audience: Your audience is a group of consumers at the Market Day

Situation: You will create a good or service to sell at a Market Day. You will set up a booth to sell your good or service. Consumers will come to your booth to purchase your good or service.

Product: You will create a good or service to sell. You will create marketing materials such as a sign to advertise your product and a display for your booth. You will determine a price for your good/service. You will display your good/service at the Market Day and sell your product as you speak to visiting consumers. After the Market Day, you will complete a reflection piece to reflect on how well your product sold and what you could improve upon.

(For the 20-21 school year students will create a FlipGrid commercial instead of participating in the live Market Day.

Standard:

SS2E2: Identify some ways in which good and services are allocated (such as: price, majority rule, contests, force, sharing, lottery, authority, first come first served, and personal characteristics)

SS2E4: Describe the costs and benefits of personal saving and spending choices.

What are the possible ways of assessing students' prior knowledge and skills? What evidence will we look for?

- -Chalk Talk- Activity with the vocabulary words. Teacher will display vocabulary words on chart paper. Students will be given a few minutes to describe the vocabulary words on their sticky notes. Students will discuss the posters.
- -For evidence teachers will look for students to begin to formulate an idea of what the vocabulary words are.

What are the possible ways of assessing students' understanding of the central idea? What evidence, including student-initiated actions, will we look for?

- -Exit Ticket
- -Headband Activity

Reflections

General Reflections

Looking Back

Susie Hendrickson May 9, 2022 at 3:14 PM

Due to health restrictions we had to adjust our market day. Students created a business providing a good or service to share economic resources within a community. Students replicated a model of the product. By doing this students learned about scarcity, supply and demand, opportunity cost, and real life difficulties.

Liz Jacobs May 24, 2023 at 1:17 PM

Students were engaged and excited about learning about money. Many students learned the concept of money and scarcity, the value of money and the importance of budgeting. The GRASP assessment was very beneficial: students created google slides/poster describing their perfect day (Yes Day) that could be accomplished with a certain amount of money. Students researched the activities they chose, weighed the benefits and opportunity costs of each decision, and used math to add up their activities. Students had time to share their perfect Yes Days with their classmates.

Anne Barrett Sessa Feb 15, 2024 at 11:46 AM

More time will need to be spent on working on problem solving for the summative assessment.

Anne Barrett Sessa Feb 15, 2024 at 11:48 AM

While students were able to work on probelm solviing the termology of causation and function could have been expanded

Looking Forward

Susie Hendrickson May 9, 2022 at 3:16 PM

We are looking forward to executing this project to its fullest potential when health guidelines are lifted.
